

NYC's Most Instagrammable Bars

by DILLON MAFIT

There are only two reasons to go on Instagram: to see what cool things other people are doing and to show people what cool things you're doing. That's right, people seek out Insta-famous bars, dishes and cocktails just to get a photo that will get them likes on the app—or to have the same experience their Instagram friends posted about the week before. So whether you're looking to induce some Instagram envy or satisfy your own, we've got you covered. From posh bars at some of the city's finest hotels, to secret speakeasies with decadent old fashioned interiors, here is a list of bars in New York where you can snap some Insta-worthy posts.

Savage

This is not the first time we've waxed poetic about this Greenpoint, Brooklyn, bar. On top of sporting one of our favorite cocktail menus and the best damn Martini in New York, this beloved bar also happens to have one of the most beautifully well-designed spaces we've seen in recent years. Unlike most cocktail bars that maintain the dark, stuffy stylings of a 1920s speakeasy with dark wood, exposed brick and Edison bulbs, Savage is the exact opposite. Taking cues from seaside towns in Southern France with open air, natural light and fresh colorways, the bar mixes old world, haute interior design with touches of Art Nouveau and clean modernity. The back bar is made of glass and elegant glitzy brass, which is everywhere, down to the shakers and bar spoons the staff use. In the summer, this is the bar where you want to spend the entire afternoon, sipping a cocktail with the breeze on your back, as you bask in the beauty of the room.
